How does Trick or Treat work?

Trick or Treat has been written for 8 to 24 (or more) monsters aged eight and up. (You can play with younger monsters – but they will probably need some adult help.) The monsters are organised into gangs, and they must cooperate together to create potions and win the contests. The gang with the most treats wins!

The step-by-step instructions explain how to tailor Trick or Treat to suit the number of monsters coming to your party.

Trick or Treat lasts for about an hour and is ideal as part of a larger party – such as a birthday party. Two or three adults are needed to run the party, and one person needs to prepare everything beforehand.

You will need some treats – plastic coins, poker chips, coloured plastic gems. How much you need depends on how large your party is, but about 15 per child should be plenty. You will also need some pens, rulers and other craft materials.
