TRAGEDY IN THE ALPS!

FAMOUS COUPLE DIE IN TRAGIC ACCIDENT

June 13th, 1935: Lord Edward and Lady Judith Westing, one of the most celebrated couples in Europe, recently died in a tragic hot air balloon accident while in the Swiss Alps. Officials are still investigating but initial reports indicate that a sudden weather change with greatly reduced visibility caused the accident. The couple were enjoying a ride in their new hot air balloon and strayed too close to the mountains when fog rolled in. Officials are speculating that they were unable to navigate their balloon to safety before they crashed into the mountainside. What a truly tragic ending for this exciting and adventurous young couple.

ANTIQUES THIEF STRIKES AGAIN!

FROM THE NEW YORK POST:

June 21st, 1935: We have recently heard that an antiques thief, styling himself as 'Mr. Flynn' has been striking the upper echelons of society. None of the families that have been robbed (both here and in Europe) have been willing to admit to it but those in the know have confirmed some valuable pieces have gone missing. It certainly reminds this reporter of 'The Jaguar': a notorious jewelry thief who still remains at large.

ECCENTRIC COUPLE'S LEGACY CONTINUES

EVEN IN DEATH THE WESTINGS ARE THE HOSTS WITH THE MOST

June 20th, 1935: It appears that even after death Lord Edward and Lady Judith Westing have the hottest tickets in town. The couple, whose recent untimely death shocked the world, are not done with us yet. A provision of their will requires their lawyers to arrange a party to read it. However, none of their relatives or close friends will be in attendance. In fact, the majority of the guests have never met the Westings. No one is sure what the Westings' intention was with this odd provision; and the firm representing them, Smyth & Johnson, have been close-mouthed about any details. Fortunately we were able to get an exclusive look at the guest list for the party. It includes the celebrated ballerina Natalya Sudakova, the renowned author Marion Miles and the internationally famous French private detective Camille Perroquet. The Westings have also requested a rather unusual host for the evening: Helen Trout, a somewhat well-to-do shopkeeper. This is not the first time they have asked for an unusual host: who can forget the party to raise funds for the London Zoo, hosted by a lion-tamer?

As this is, one assumes, their final party, it should be the most surprising and extravagant yet. It is well known that the Westings were generous in life and it is hard to imagine they will be any less so for their final farewell. If we can judge by previous gatherings hosted by Lord and Lady Westing, this final party should be one to die for.
